

Does my child have to take the asthma medicine that the doctor prescribes my child?

By publisher

Created 06/16/2009 - 15:12

Yes. The medicine your doctor gives to your child will help control your child's asthma. It is important that your child take his or her medicine as directed by your doctor. That means,

If your doctor prescribes
Quick-relief medication

Then, your child will

- Take the medicine at the first signs of an asthma attack.

You and your child's doctor should agree on what those first signs are.

Controller medication

- Take his or her medicine everyday to help prevent asthma attacks.

If your child does not take his or her controller medicine everyday, then your child will have more asthma attacks more often.

Child

for my child? up What is Asthma Severity?: Intermittent Asthma or Persistent Asthma

Source URL:

<http://www.asthmabasics.org/handbook/be-prepared-make-a-plan/does-my-child-have-to-take-the-asthma-medicine-that-the-doctor-prescribes>